CLOTHING SPECIALS!

"UP GUARDS AND AT THEM!" won for Wellington a Waterloo, and the same clarion tones have inspired all business efforts. The general who pauses is lost, and so is the business man. Quick decision and prompt action are necessary if a store is to grow and keep on growing. The success of one year with us is never high enough mark for the next, and it is only because we do our best every day that sales continue to grow.

The unusually backward season upset all our calculations, and the only way to make up for lost time is to offer values that are distinctly worth your while. If you're out for clothes of any sort, now's your chance! It will pay you to buy now for a year to come.

Every day, new customers get acquainted with our way of selling clothes. The idea of choosing where there's nothing but good quality to choose from, where you can be sure of getting value for every dollar you pay, where back of every sale is a guarantee of your continued satisfaction is making us new friends right along.

AROUND THE TOWN

Miss Fair of Lethbridge is visiting Mrs. L. J. Kalbfleisch.

N. Weicker announces that he will in future take in hogs every Monday. Top price will be paid.

For good concrete building blocks call on Milton Moyer at Shantz and Co.'s lumber yard.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Snyder arrived here this week on a visit to friends, before taking up their residence in Camrose, Alta.

For Sale.—Two dairy cows, your choice from six head. One work horse. Some nice pigs. Appy P. P. Johnson, 3½ miles east of Didsbury.

George Moore of Sebringville, Ont., is visiting his friend Mr. L. J. Kalbfleisch for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Snyder have arrived in town, where they intend to stay for a while, before taking up their residence in Camrose.

Bring along your shoe-repairing. We can assure you first class workmanship at short notice. Prices right. J. V. Bersch.

You should use concrete building blocks for that foundation under your house. See Milton Moyer at Shantz & Co.'s lumber yard.

Parties intending to go to Banff with the Sunday School Excursion on Friday, July 23rd should arrange to purchase tickets at least the day previous.

A deal was completed last week between Messrs. M. Weber and C. C. Pearson, whereby the former takes over the flour and feed business, which has been conducted by Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Emerson Morrison the contractor, is suffering from an attack of blood poisoning caused by running a nail into his foot. He is getting along as well as can be expected, but is only able to get around on crutches.

Tickets are not sold by the Railroad Agents, but through the Committee, who have made an advance guarantee for this special train. Tickets can be bought at the following places:—H. W. Chambers, druggist; J. V. Bersch's store, Didsbury Post Office, and J. Nixon, jeweller.

If a job's worth doing, it's worth doing well; people are proving this every day by giving their boots and shoes to Fred Horton to be repaired. The superiority of his work is remembered long after the price is forgotten, and his charges are reasonable. Workshop in Messrs. Reitzel & Kalbfleisch's store.

A team of horses belonging to Peter Friesen of Lone Pine, became frightened at an automobile on Oster Street on Monday morning. Miss Mary Friesen was thrown from the wagon, but luckily escaped serious injury; although at first it was thought that her arm was broken, on being taken to Dr. Weart's office it was found that it was only badly bruised.

The Sherrys' high class comedians, musicians, vocalists and dancers. Don't fail to see them in their latest comedy plays, entitled "Jackson's Honeymoon," "The Night before Election" and "Breaking into Vaudeville" each one a scream. New music, new songs, new dances, clever magic, quick changes, no waits. This troupe is one of the best on the road to-day. Your money back if you are not satisfied. Opera House, Tuesday, July 26th.

July is babies' month at Vogel's Studio. We have a splendid assortment of baby folders and mounts. These are at reduced rates.

Mr. E. Finkle, the C. P. R. agent, has received promotion to Inspector of Agencies for his road, and Mr. Trickey, relief agent has taken his place at Didsbury. Mr. Finkle's many friends in Didsbury and district will wish him all success in his new position and, being a young man, expect to see him rise to a still higher position with his employers. He will reside in Didsbury for the present.

Clenn Bros. were very successful at the recent Calgary Fair with their display of pipe, receiving four prizes, one first and 3 seconds, and one second prize on Clyde filly. They traded a young Holstein bull for another Holstein bull which stood first in its class, and which is registered in the American herd book, his sire being a Cornydale bull. They were well pleased with the treatment accorded them at the Exhibition.

Council Meets

The Council met in regular session Monday evening, Mayor Atkins, Councillors, Lemmer, Hunsperger, Moyer, St. Clair, Osmond and Sec. Reed being present.

The meeting was one of the shortest of the year, very little business being on hand with the exception of opening tenders for sidewalk, sidewalk laying and brush cutting which were disposed of as follows:

Lumber for sidewalk, tenders from D. S. Shantz & Co. $60; Bowman-Sime Lumber Co. $30. Left in the hands of the Civic Works Committee.

Sidewalk construction, two tenders, one at 100 a foot the other at 80 a rod were given in. Mr. Imay was given the contract at 80 a rod.

Tenders for brush cutting on C. & E. land were opened but as the Council do not have to pay for this the tenders will be sent to the Company by Secretary Reed.

Coun. St. Clair, chairman of the Civic Works Committee, presented a report of the expenditures of his department from the beginning of the session until the present, which amounted to $600.

The Council were well satisfied with the report as a large amount of work can be shown for this expenditure and they were agreeably surprised at the amount of work under Coun. St. Clair's supervision.

Coun. St. Clair was instructed to complete the fencing around the park and also to get the same plowed up if possible. The Council then adjourned.

BIRTHS

Headaches and Neuralgic Pains Promptly Cured by
"Fruit-tives."

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation, Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning.

Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body.

Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of waste.

The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which hurts the nerves and causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-tives" are made from fruit juices set on the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-tives" is sold by all dealers at 5¢ a box, 6 for $2.50, or retail size, 25¢, and may be obtained from Fruit-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

It's easy to grow plants in a Sunshine-heated home

Pure, Warm Sunshine Air

PEOPLE living in homes heated with ordinary furnaces often claim they cannot grow plants with any degree of success. This is due to the fact that ordinary furnaces are not provided with an Automatic Gas Damper. There is nothing to prevent coal-gas, which is deadly to plant life, being forced up through the registers.

Now, when the gas in the combustion chamber of the Sunshine reaches a certain pressure it automatically opens the Automatic Gas Damper and passes up the chimney, consequently there is no chance for it to escape through the registers. Instead, the air that passes through the registers is pure, warm, Sunshine air, laden with the proper degree of moisture from the water-pan. It's the kind of air that makes plants thrive and is good to breath into your own lungs.

If you want to ensure your home (and who doesn't?) against smelling death, you can give our agent to install the Sunshine furnace (guaranteed) in your cellar.

Patriotism

BY W. G.

Perhaps there is no subject which requires to be kept before our minds so much as that of patriotism.

What is patriotism? Answered negatively, it is not jingoism any more than jingoism is patriotism; positively it is the loyalty, pride, respect and love a man has for his country.

Patriotism implies more than the heroic spirit which prompts a volunteer to leave home and kindred to defend his country's honour upon a battle plain under a tropical sun. It means that in the homeland amidst life's commonplace, (where are more heroic souls than ever graced the field of battle) an individual be true to his town and to his country, for it is in civic and domestic, even more than in national and imperial affairs, that one's patriotism is put to the severest test.

A splendid illustration of patriotism is to be found in early Rome. From infancy, the young Roman was taught to regard his country with affection and love, and it was this national patriotic spirit that gave the Roman Empire a foremost place in the earlier ages of the world's history. A loss of pride and self respect, and a laxity of morals led to her final degeneracy and decay.

Nations have come and gone since the sceptre of power passed from the utech of the Roman Eagle, but the lofty ideal of patriotism still stands on its pedestal on the "Mount of Time," an inspiration to mankind in its ascent up the steep sides of progress.

Patriotism comes under two heads, viz: Municipal and National, and it is with the first of these that this article has to do. Municipal patriotism or the loyalty and pride an individual has for his community, consists mainly of two things: 1st. "The duty of the individual to the Municipality" and 2nd, "The duty of the Municipality to the individual."

First: Every citizen owes a duty to the town of which he is a resident.

The growth, development and well-being of the municipality are in direct proportion to the practical interest he takes in the administration of its affairs.

There is involved of necessity, a certain amount of sacrifice, but through sacrifice is evolved the highest type of citizenship. A man requires to contribute some of his time, money and talents, and the placing of these on the altar of duty, gives him a just claim to the title of a "Municipal Patriot."

It is an easy thing to stand idly by and, with an air of satisfaction, criticize a local administration because of its defects, without so much as stepping into the breach, and making an

CHAPTER XLII.

MRS. SAUNDERS HAS A PLAN.

MISS PEHLMAN's affairs with Thomas Saunders by this time had reached the stage where observers feel a hesitancy about twisting the parties most concerned.

Miss Pehlman was clever and more clever than Saunders, and it is he who was a girl," said Britt. "She's found out that he earns a thousand a year and that his mother is a very old woman. That shows foresight. She says she's just crazy about London, although she doesn't know what her mother-in-law is. That shows discernment. She's anxious to see the books at Putney and takes like an encyclopedic about Kew gardens. That shows diplomacy. You see, Saunders lives in London, and from that bridge, all alone with his mother, who owns the house and garden. It's all very appealing to Miss Pehlman, who has got devilish tired of seeing the universe from a nineteenth story in Broadway. "She's a very nice girl," agreed Britt.

"A very saucy one," added Dunningham, who had come a severe trooper in his single attempt to interest her in a mild flirtation.

"She's off with Saunders now," went Britt. "What's the reason you can't find him, my lord? If you really want him, however, I think you can have him by strolling through the lower end of the park, but don't fall to short."

"I don't want him, confound him! I want to ask him how many days there are left before our time is up on the island. Don't be annoyed that I can't have legal advice when I—"

"How many days have you been here?"

"How the devil should I know? That's what we've got Saunders here for. You're supposed to tell us when to go home and all that sort of thing, you know."

Deppingham, phlegmatic soul, was forever disturbing Saunders with calls to duty, although Saunders was bristly enough in his British way to maintain that he was of no use to any cause, save in the employ of Lady Deppingham or no one at all. Nevertheless he always lived under the shadow of duty. At any moment his lordship was liable to send him to ask the time of day or some equally important question. It was in the middle of the hour when Saunders unfolded his startling solution to the problem that confronted them all.

First he confided in Britt soberly, sagely and in perfect good faith. Britt was bowled over. He told Saunders that he was a man. And so the two men clasped before he could find words to reply, which proves conclusively that it must have been something of a shock to him. When at last he did express himself, however, there was nothing but a faint smile left hanging on his mouth. He had not so far as to call Saunders a doddering fool and a great many other things that Saunders had not in the least expected.

The Englishman was stubborn. They had it back and forth, from legal to illegal, from the right to the wrong Britt gave in to his colleague, reserving the right to laugh when it was all over. Saunders, with a determination that surprised even himself, called for a conference of all parties in Wyndham's study of 4, Cock Lane.

"Now, what's the idea about Saunders?" demanded Deppingham, with a wide yawn. Saunders looked hurt.

"It is high time we were discussing some way out of our difficulties," he said. "But five weeks remain before our time is up. There is the impossibility of marriage between Lady Deppingham and Mr. Browne naturally throws our joint cause into jeopardy. There would be no controversy, of course, if the terms of the will could be carried out in that respect. But in his present state our position seems unsure in that regard. They imagine that they have us beaten on the face of things. Now, the thing for us to do is to get married."

He came to this conclusion with startling abruptness. Four of his hearers stared at him in blank astonishment.

"Get married?" murmured first one then another.

"Are you crazy?" demanded Browne. Britt was grinning broadly.

"Certainly not!" snapped Saunders.

"Oh, by Jove!" exclaimed Deppingham, relieved. "I see. You mean you contestants getting married. I can understand you. You gave me quite a shock, Sod!"

"I don't mean anything of the sort, my lord," said Saunders, getting very red in the face. Miss Pehlman looked up from her notebook quickly. He wished to be sure that Britt's opinion did not fit her, and mean that it is high time that Lady Deppingham and Mr. Browne were getting married. We haven't much time to spare, it!"

"Good Lord!" snarled Bobby Browne. "You are crazy, after all."

"Open the window and give some air," said Britt coolly.

"Come here, Saunders, what the devil is the matter with you?" roared Deppingham.

"My lord, I am here to act as your legal adviser," said Saunders with dignity. "May I be permitted to proceed?"

"Father, queer legal advice, 'pon my word!"

"Please let him explain," put in Mrs. Browne, whose sense of humor was strongly attracted by this time. "It is there anything more to be learned concerning matrimony I'd like to know it!"

"Yes, Mr. Saunders, you may proceed," said Lady Agnes, passing a hand over her bewildered eyes.

"Thank you, my lady. Well, here it is in a nutshell: I have not spoken of my wife, but you and Mr. Browne can very easily comply with the provisions of the will. You can be married at any time. Now, I—"

"And where do I come in?" demanded Deppingham sarcastically.

"You, and I," added Mrs. Browne. "You're not married, are you?"

"I include Mrs. Browne," amended Deppingham. "I am here to be assassinated? By Jove, clever idea of yours, Saunders! Simpletons matters tremendously."

He heard no objection from the heirs, remonstrated Saunders meaningfully, whereupon Lady Agnes and Bobby came out of their stupor and protested vigorously.

"Saunders, you may proceed," said Britt.

"A very saucy one," added Dunningham, who had come a severe trooper in his single attempt to interest her in a mild flirtation.

"She's off with Saunders now," went Britt. "What's the reason you can't find him, my lord? If you really want him, however, I think you can have him by strolling through the lower end of the park, but don't fall to short."

"I don't want him, confound him! I want to ask him how many days there are left before our time is up on the island. Don't be annoyed that I can't have legal advice when I—"

"How many days have you been here?"

"How the devil should I know? That's what we've got Saunders here for. You're supposed to tell us when to go home and all that sort of thing, you know."

Deppingham, phlegmatic soul, was forever disturbing Saunders with calls to duty, although Saunders was bristly enough in his British way to maintain that he was of no use to any cause, save in the employ of Lady Deppingham or no one at all. They imagine that they have us beaten on the face of things. Now, the thing for us to do is to get married."

"But, my lord," said Saunders, "the plan you give Lady Deppingham two husbands? It's quite a fall division."

"It would make Lord Deppingham my husband-in-law, I imagine," said Drusilla quizzically. "I've always had a horror of husbands-in-law."

"And you would be my wife-in-law," supplemented Lady Agnes. "How interesting!"

""Bosh!" said Deppingham soberly. "I must oppose your plan. It's quite unfair to two innocent and uninvolved parties. What have we done that we should be exempt from polygamy?"

"We are not exempt!" exclaimed the harassed solicitor. "You are merely not obliged to that's all. You can do as you choose about it. I'm sure, I'm sorry my plan causes so much levity. It is meant for the good of our cause. The will doesn't say how many wives Mr. Browne can have. It simply says that Agnes Britt still has at that time lived in Heckleton, a hamlet of the St. Lawrence valley. So much interest did the drama create when first published, that a stock company resident in Toronto gave a private performance of it. The critic who published it was one of the judges of manuscript plays in the recent Earl Grey competition."

"He isn't restricted, you know. He can be a polygamist if he likes."

"You're right," said Britt. "The will doesn't specify. But, my dear Saunders, you are overlooking your own rights."

"I don't quite understand, Mr. Britt."

"As I understand the laws on this island—the church laws, at least—a man can have as many wives as he likes. Well, that's all very well for Mr. Browne. But that isn't also a fact that a woman can have no more than one husband?" said Britt.

"Saunders, you may proceed," said Britt. "You have got marriage on the brain. I'd advise you to take some one for a walk."

"To you that means that for me, Lord Deppingham?" demanded Miss Pehlman sharply. She glared at him and then slammed her notebook on the table. "You can josh Mr. Saunders, but you can't josh me. I'm on top of this job. You are simply out to do your work after this. I'm through."

"Oh!" exclaimed every one, in a panic. It took nearly ten minutes to pacify the ruffled stenographer.

"He can't do anything but arrange for a divorce all round," cried Saunders, suddenly inspired.

"On what grounds?" laughed Brownie.

"It's barely possible that there is no divorce law in Japan," remarked Britt, enjoining his confessor's misery.

"Are you reasonable? If there was such a law I'll make the head two-thirds of the men in Ararat would be getting rid of their wives before night."

"I'm tired," said Lady Deppingham suddenly. She yawned and stretched her arms. "I'll go to bed now. I'm not going to bed again."

"I include Mrs. Browne," amended Britt.

"Are you reasonable? If there was such a law I'll make the head two-thirds of the men in Ararat would be getting rid of their wives before night."

"I'm tired," said Lady Deppingham suddenly. She yawned and stretched her arms. "I'll go to bed now. I'm not going to bed again."

"On condition that you will spare Deppingham's wife," very prettily and easily. Mrs. Browne laughed with amazing good grace, but there was a new expression in her eyes.

Sensatory Transmission.

It has been found that sensation is not absolutely independent of time, but that a very minute time elapses as it travels along the nerves. Therefore if a person puts his finger to a heated iron or to the blade of a candle there is a small space of time, say the one-thousandth part of a second, before the brain knows of the burn.

"I'm tired," said Lady Deppingham suddenly. She yawned and stretched her arms. "I'll go to bed now. I'm not going to bed again."

"On condition that you will spare Deppingham's wife," very prettily and easily. Mrs. Browne laughed with amazing good grace, but there was a new expression in her eyes.

The Mat.

The modern mat can be traced back to the petasurus worn by the ancient Roman when on a journey, and hats with brims were also used by the earlier Greeks. It was not until after the middle of the twentieth century that a small space of time, say the one-thousandth part of a second, before the brain knows of the burn.

"I'm tired," said Lady Deppingham suddenly. She yawned and stretched her arms. "I'll go to bed now. I'm not going to bed again."

"On the other hand," he hastened to remark, "I'm sure it would be quite legal if you did live to—"

"Stop him for heaven's sake!" screamed Lady Agnes, bursting into uncontrollable laughter.

"Stop him, I say!" demanded her husband, suddenly seeing what he regarded as a rare joke. "I'll stop him for heaven's sake!"

"Of course you are going to be nasty about it," said Saunders in a huff.

"I'm not saying anything about it," said Saunders. "You say they can be married according to the customs—which, I take it, are the laws of the islanders. Your plan provides Browne with two charming wives and gives me but one. That's a strong reason to compel Mrs. Browne to marry me."

"But, my lord," said Saunders, "the plan you give Lady Deppingham two husbands? It's quite a fall division."

"It would make Lord Deppingham my husband-in-law, I imagine," said Drusilla quizzically. "I've always had a horror of husbands-in-law."

A CANADIAN TRAGEDY.

Author of the Runaway of David Keith Unknown to Fame.

Ten years ago a Toronto dramatic critic had submitted to him for criticism a tragedy entitled "The Runaway of David Keith." The production was absolutely bona fide, and permission was granted to publish it. It was one of the judges of manuscript plays in the recent Earl Grey competition.

He is now resident in Heckleton, a hamlet of the St. Lawrence valley. So much interest did the drama create when first published, that a stock company resident in Toronto gave a private performance of it. The critic who published it was one of the judges of manuscript plays in the recent Earl Grey competition.

Westcott Sports

Saturday was a gala day at Westcott the occasion being the celebration of the annual Sports Day. The weather was all that could be desired and three hundred people took advantage of the chance to spend a day in the beautiful valley at the Dog Pound creek. Several Didsbury people went out and had a good time with the Westcott contestants. The ladies who had charge of the fair are to be congratulated on the great success which attended their efforts and it is safe to say that much larger places than Westcott seldom have a better time than was provided for those present.

There were a large number of athletic events on the programme but they were too numerous to give the names of the winners.

The day started with a 200-yard swimming race which was won by the following: 1st, G. W. Fawcett; 2nd, A. G. Ginn; 3rd, A. W. Fawcett and 4th, A. G. Ginn, her son. Other events on the programme included horse races, winners of which were as follows: Half-mile free for all, B. Reid 1st, Gus Reid 2nd, Geo. Metzger 3rd; Cowboy race, Mert Stringer 1st, Wilder 2nd, R. C. Ray 3rd; Half-mile ladies' race, Miss Frakes 1st, Miss Cowman 2nd; Mule race, Earl Coker 1st, S. R. Singer 2nd.

The tug-of-war between the married and single men resulted in a win for the single men.

Two baseball games were played, one between Waterloo and Cremona, in which Cremona was victorious, and one between Westcott and Didsbury, in which Didsbury won the laurels.

A football game was played in the evening between Westcott and Waterloo which resulted in a tie score.

All competitions were keenly contested and a large number of entries were made for each event. The promoters of Westcott Sports Day should feel well pleased at their success.

PATRIOTISM

honest attempt to assist in remedying and bettering of conditions.

We live in an age, when in the commercial realm, the principal of co-operation is becoming an established fact, and with beneficial results.

As in the commercial sphere, so in the municipal, a co-operation existing between its people and the governing body, would tend to promote the best interests of the community. Speaking in a general sense, the reason that so little of a practical nature is accomplished by our local councils is because of the apathy and indifference of the electorate.

An apathetic and indifferent electorate cannot expect to have the best administration; rather the reverse; its lethargy spells its own doom. What all our Western towns need, is a larger public spirit. The mercenary idea is far too prevalent, and it does seem almost incredible that the estimate of municipal life should too often be that of "how much can we get out of it," instead of "how much can we put into it" of ourselves and of our character. It is clearly evident then, that a local administration to be successful must have the whole-hearted support of the people.

Second: The duty of the Municipality to the individual.

It is the grouping of individual units that constitutes a community, and therefore it is obvious that the governing bodies, composed of men duly elected and chosen by the people to represent the community. It is true that upon the individual tax payer rests the responsibility of electing to office those who are to act in the interests of the town, it is equally so that a corresponding responsibility devolves upon those elected to be the tax payer. The maintenance of proper sanitary conditions, of good streets and sidewalks, of judicious street lighting, and anything that tends to promote healthy and bright conditions, demands the most careful and unceasing attention. The members of the governing body of the municipality, have the duty of the "powers that be" lies in making the town as attractive as possible. Public gardens with a fountain and handstand where bi-monthly contests can be held during the fine weather, will be much factor in the more progressive towns. The establishment and safeguarding of public utilities, and the beautifying and adornment of our towns are the Alpha and Omega of municipal duty.
